The St. Petersburg Open history began in 1994 when the first International tennis tournament ATP St. Petersburg Open was organized for the first time in St. Petersburg. Heads and owners of the leading companies of St. Petersburg and Russia, well-known politicians, public figures, representatives of foreign countries – all of them are usual guests and spectators of the competition. Moreover, the Governor of St. Petersburg, Valentina Matvienko is the Head of the tournament's Organizing Committee. According to the booking's total about 300 000 people attended the matches between 2002 and 2006. Besides that, millions of spectators all over the world watched the tournament matches on television as they are always broadcasted by main Russian and world TV-channels. The high organizational level of St. Petersburg Open was appreciated within Russia and abroad.
